OUR IRON INTERESTS WHAT OF THE FUTURE? That the State of Tennessee has almost boundless resources is a fact patent to any one who will travel over it. In a recent visit through some of the western counties of Middle Tennessee, our impression as to the value of our iron interests was greatly heightened. In Stewart, Montgomery Dickson, Perry, Lawrence, Wayne and Hickman are deposits of iron ore that are practically inexhaustible, and the present high prices of iron makes it a tempting field for investment by men of capital and energy. Here may be won the glittering prize of wealth for which so many are contending. Not only the timber and iron are abundant, but farming lauds of wonderful fertility are to be found all along the bottoms, where may grow all DEMOCRATIC STATE EXECUTIVE the supplies necessary to support a large population. In 1855 this whole region of country resounded with the ponderous blows of the trip hammer; the blazing roar of the furnaces and the sharp whack of the wood-choppers axe. Immense quantities of iron were made, and the supply went ahead of the demand. Large numbers of those who embarked in the business failed. and since 1856 but comparatively few iron regard the following: establishments have been carried on.

It is gratifying to note the fact that the annual consumption of iron has doubled since that period, and this danger of oversupply the White House. In this state of things does not and cannot exist for many years. Hartranft, the Grant-Cameron candidate Mr. Abram S. Hewitt, in an address before the American Institute of Mining Engineers that assembled in New York a short time since, gives some interesting figures tracing the history of the manufacture of iron and establishing its law of development. In the year 1856, Great Britain produced 3,-500,000 tons and the United States 1,000,-000 tons. The annual production throughout the civilized world reached 7,000,000 meeting in Toledo, Ohio, on June 28, to tons. Great Britain at that time consumed ratify the Cincinnati nominations of Gree- per head 144 pounds and the United States 84 pounds while the average consumption per h ad of the world was only 17 pounds. It was then shown that the consumption was steadily on the increase, and the conclusion was arrived at that this increased demand would cause the production to be doubled in fourteen years. The returns show that in 1871 to promote dissension as it was to stay the the production amounted to 13,500,000 tons and in 1872, at the expiration of sixteen years, the limit, 14,000,000 tons, will doubt less be realized, notwithstanding the bloody and disastrous wars that have taken place both in Europe and America. The consumption in England has risen to 200 pounds per head; in the United States abiding Baltimore. Ten are non-committal. | to 150 pounds, and in the whole | world | to 30 pounds. If the consumption of iron, as Mr. Hewitt maintains, is in a measure to the progress of civilization, no more gratify. ing record can be had than the above state ment. able business.

With this brilliant prospect for the future of iron, we may congratulate ourselves upon the extent and richness of our ores, and the quantity and quality of our coal and timber. The field is open, and we should rejoice to see a greater number of our young men entering schools of industry and arts, and preparing themselves to take advantage of the situation. We want to-day in the State of Tennessee twenty thousand young men who can gear up our streams, diversify our manufacturing interests, and make Tennessee what she should be the home of five millions of happy, contented people, enjoying all the benefits and blessings of civilization - cheapening processes without diminishing wages, so that all may enjoy the comforts and necessaries of life, without infringing upon the the rights of capital on the one hand, or the just demands of labor on the other.
